Elder Profile: Marian Goulais

Previously published - Marian Goulais was born Marian Larivierre to Peter and Angeline Larivierre on February 7, 1915 in Frank's Bay, Lake Nipissing.

She had two brothers: Peter and Joesph, and four sisters: Nancy Beaucage, Roseanna McQuabbie, Theresa Commanda, and Christine Beaucage. Marian is the youngest in her family.

Marian was raised in Frank's Bay until her first marriage to George Commanda when she was 20 years old. They had three children: Rene, Rena, and one child who died. Marian was widowed after six years. She later married Louis Goulais and had two more children: Eric who now resides at the crossing, and Jean who lives with Marian in Duchesnay. They lived at Crossing for 30 years. She was widowed once again on Louis' passing in the 1980's. Marian married Albert Goulais a few years ago and they remained together until Albert's death last year. Today, Marian has five grandchildren.

Marian did a lot of garden work in her younger years and also did some beading and leather work. She now busies herself making quilts.

How can I get rid of rats and mice?

Prevention

Prevention is key in controlling rats and mice problems in your home.

Rodent-proof your home

The first line of defense is to get rid of easy entry points. Mice can squeeze through cracks as small as a dime, while rats can enter through a quarter-sized hole. Even the small gaps created by worm thresholds under doors will allow mice access to your home.

- Use metal weather stripping under doors, and weather strip windows.
- Patch cracks in foundations.
- Stuff steel wool around pipes before caulking or plastering.
- Cover dryer vents, attic vents, and soffits with fine mesh metal screening.

Make your home less appealing to rodents

- Remove cozy nesting sites in unused clutter around your house and garage.
- Cut tall grass and weeds back from your house.
- Secure garbage in containers with tight-fitting lids.
- Raise woodpiles about 30 centimeters (1 foot) off the ground. Place them away from your house.
- Never place fatty or oily food waste, eggs, or milk products in the composter.
- Use a layer of heavy metal mesh between the soil and the bottom of the composter.
- Eliminate waste sources (like leaky taps, sweating pipes, and open drains).
- Keep your kitchen clean. Store dry food and dry pet food in metal or glass containers.

Physical control options

Traps

There are several types of traps that can be used to control rats and mice. Snap traps and electronic traps are easy to use and very effective if well positioned and set properly. They generally kill rats and mice instantly. Live traps have trap doors that are triggered when rats or mice walk over them.

Follow the manufacturer's directions on how to use a particular trap. These are general guidelines:

- Most traps without covers should be set at right angles to the wall, with the baited end of the trap closest to the wall. Some traps (like electronic traps and covered snap traps) should be set with the entrance parallel and flush against the wall. Set 1 trap per metre (yard) along walls, or 5 to 10 traps per visible mouse hole.

How can I get rid of rats and mice? (con't)

- Allow a warm-up period of 3 to 4 days (bait the traps but do not set them), so that the rats or mice become comfortable taking the bait.
- Use baits of strong-smelling, sticky foods like peanut butter, bacon grease mixed with oats, raisins, or gumdrops.
- Reuse the traps: they are more attractive to rats and mice.
- Move traps to different locations if the bait does not disappear regularly.
- Reset the traps in 2 to 3 weeks to catch maturing rats and mice.
- Glue traps are also available and can be used with or without bait.

Note: It is important to check all types of traps daily.

Important!

If you use a pesticide to control your pest problem, read the label to make sure you are choosing the right product for the right pest. Follow all label directions and warnings carefully. Always look for a Pest Control Products (PCP) number on the label so you know the product has been approved by Health Canada. See Use pesticides safely for more information on using pesticides safely.

Products

Baits or poisons should not be used as the only method to control rats and mice. Other management strategies such as rat and mouse-proofing and good sanitation must be used to achieve satisfactory control of rats and mice.

- Poisoned baits are a common way of controlling rodents; they must be used with a tamper-proof bait station in areas accessible to children and pets. Read the product label and follow the label directions and safety precautions closely.
- Anticoagulant rodenticides prevent the clotting of blood. These products are sold to the general public in a solid form such as a paraffin block. Note: Anticoagulants are usually highly toxic. Keep away from children and pets.
- Other products containing non-anticoagulant poisons available to the general public include the active ingredients cellulose from powdered corn cobs and bromethalin.

- Commercial class products must be applied by a certified professional. Commercial applicators have access to other bait types such as loose pre-mixed bait.
- Repellents may also be used to discourage rats and mice from damaging young trees and ornamentals, structures, and garbage bags.

Cleaning

Use caution when near urine and droppings:

- Wear rubber gloves and a dust mask during cleanup.
- Dampen droppings and debris with a solution of bleach and water before wiping up.
- Wear gloves to dispose of dead rats and mice.
- Double bag the bodies of dead rats and mice in plastic bags and put in a garbage bin with a secure lid.
- Wash hands and exposed clothing thoroughly after clean-up, and separate from other laundry.
- Never sweep or vacuum dry droppings. The dust that is raised can cause illness.

Art at Nbisiing

Students in our culturally focused art class are now delving into the self-directed studio portion of the course. Students are determining the path they want to take to create their own works after learning about contemporary and traditional Indigenous art from across Turtle Island. We wanted to take the opportunity to highlight one of our artists who immersed themselves in their traditional teachings and have started to create a Inuit soapstone collection.

Earth Day 2024

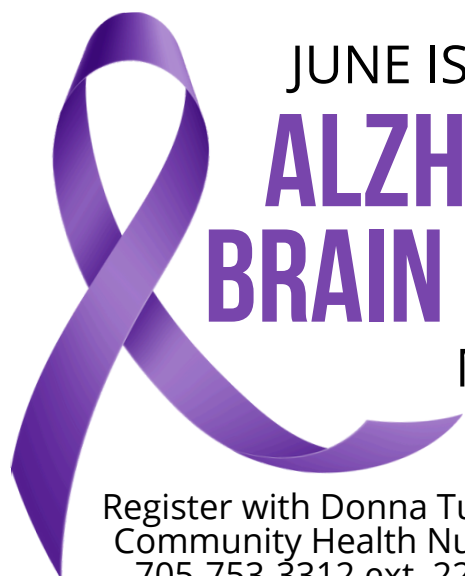

For Earth Day this year, Nbisiing Students participated in a community cleanup to help Mother Earth. Blair Beaucage from the Culture Department started our cleanup in a good way with an inspiring talk about the importance of the land, resources, and water.

Carving Donation

One of our guest artists, Dave Liberty, has been assisting our art class in our sculpting projects. He has donated Nbisiing one of his cedar wood carvings. The carving depicts turtles lifting the moon into the night sky, working together to support the effort. It represents perseverance, persistence, and teamwork.
